Is the manuscript important for the scientific community? Please write a few sentences explaining your answer	Yes, the authors have attempted to detect the algal bloom using satellite images (MODIS), studied phytoplankton blooms, rainfall, and occurrence, and associated it with fish mortalities. However, considering satellite image availability and cloud coverage limitations, this cannot be termed an early warning system. Instead, it can be used as one of the parameters of the early warning system.
Is the title of the article suitable? Do you have any alternative Title in your mind?	No. I recommend changing the title because the significant work of this manuscript is on algal bloom detection using satellite images rather than an early warning system. Hence, the title shall be "Detection of Algal Blooms using satellite imagery in Jakarta Bay"
